McGuire Boyd is an experienced trial attorney with a primary focus on financial services and business disputes. He defends financial services clients against a wide variety of federal and state law claims, including both individual and class-action claims. McGuire works with some of the nation's largest banks, as well as smaller regional and community banks. Williams Mullen's financial services clients rely on McGuire's knowledge to resolve disputes involving both consumer and commercial loans, from origination and servicing to collection and enforcement.

McGuire also has broad experience representing business clients involved in a variety of commercial disputes. His goal in any litigation is to resolve matters as quickly and efficiently as possible. He also has strong trial experience and has litigated numerous cases in state and federal court. He is listed in The Best Lawyers in America® for Litigation-Banking and Finance (2019-present).

McGuire earned his B.A. from Washington & Lee University and his J.D. from Washington & Lee University School of Law, where he graduated cum laude and served as a staff writer for the Washington & Lee Law Review. Prior to law school, McGuire taught and coached for six years. He has served as a youth basketball coach for Upward Sports and Bon Air Basketball and as a mentor and lunch buddy for Communities in Schools of Virginia.
