

Kevin Pomfret Writes Article on Selling UAS Services to the Federal Government

02.28.2019

On Jan. 24, 2019, the Professional Services Council published an article authored by Williams Mullen attorney Kevin Pomfret on selling UAS services to the federal government.

"Drones are expected to provide a number of new opportunities to sell services to the federal government. Many of these services will include collecting, processing and licensing various types of data for civilian government agencies. While the opportunities will be significant, federal contractors will need to comply with the complex legal framework associated with drones and data collection."
