Carrick Brooke-Davidson's practice focuses on environmental law and litigation under federal and state environmental programs, including cases brought by private parties, the United States Department of Justice, the United States Environmental Protection Agency, and other federal and state agencies.

Before joining Williams Mullen, Carrick served as counsel in the environmental and natural resources practice group at Vinson & Elkins in Austin, Texas. For more than a decade before moving to the private sector, Carrick was an attorney in the Environment and Natural Resources Division of the U.S. Department of Justice, which he joined under the Honors Program, including serving as a Senior Attorney and Acting Assistant Chief in the Environmental Enforcement Section.

Carrick earned his Juris Doctor degree with honors from the University of Texas School of Law and bachelor's and master's degrees from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT). During law school, he founded and served as president of the Environmental & Natural Resources Law Society and as editor-in-chief of The Review of Litigation. He was also a member of the Order of the Coif and the Board of Advocates.

Prior to attending law school, Carrick was an environmental engineer with Trinity Consultants where he was a consultant on Clean Air Act technical and regulatory matters.
